PART IA

Regulation 8(1)(f)

THE CONDOMINIUM PROPERTY ACT 2001

LEGEND

A legend is to explain, among other items, the boundaries of the units, unit measurement, building locations and dimensions.

An example of a typical legend is as follows—

“All building location dimensions are perpendicular to the property lines unless otherwise shown [Radial tie distances if used should be specified (R)].

All building location dimensions and exterior building dimensions are to the exterior of the concrete foundation walls (or to exterior surface walls or you may draw an inset to show clearly the point of measurement).

The boundary of any unit with common property is the undecorated interior surface of the unit floor, wall or ceiling as the case may be (or is as stipulated in section 12 (1) (boundaries of units) of the Condominium Property Act 2001) and illustrated thus.....).

All unit dimensions and floor areas are measured to the undecorated interior surface of the unit at floor level (and/or all floor, wall and ceiling widths are derived from architect plans and are not confirmed by field measurements).

OR

All major plumbing, electrical, mechanical and structural facilities passing through or existing within unit boundaries that are required for the operation and support of the main building are common property.

Balconies and patios designated BI etc. and PI etc, respectively are common property that may be leased to the owner of the residential unit under section 38 (exclusive use of areas) of the Condominium Properties Act 2001 (and/or exclusive possession areas are common property and delineated thusand/or all carports are denoted C 15 are delineated thus and/or all are exclusive possession common property and may be leased or otherwise granted by the corporation to a unit owner under section 41 of the Act.”

PART IB

Regulation 10(1)

THE CONDOMINIUM PROPERTY ACT, 2001

DERIVATION OF UNIT FACTORS

There appears to be no prescribed formula for allocating unit factor or unit entitlement.

Its determination may be based on unit floor area or on the selling price/value of the unit or on location/position of the unit or on a combination of these factors. Whatever method is used, it is important that the unit factors are made equitable.

Generally the method based on unit floor area is more commonly used and it is recommended that until such time as other considerations come into operation, unit factor determination shall be based on floor area of the units.

For units numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4 in a condominium property building of floor areas a, b, c, and d square meters respectively, the corresponding unit factors shall be—

Unit: a x 10,000
A

Unit: b x 10,000 etc.
A

Where $A = a + b + c + d$, i.e. the sum of the floor areas of all the units in the building(s).

Since a/A or b/A will be a fraction cumbersome to work with, the figure of 10,000 is used in the multiplication purely for the convenience of obtaining whole numbers for unit factors.

Also since in a given situation A is a constant, the sum of all the derived unit factors should, in the rounding up/down of the figures, be equal to 10,000.

In the condominium plan of subdivision or consolidation, the unit factor or factors for the unit or units in the original condominium plan that are included in the subdivision or consolidation shall be apportioned among the newly created unit or units.

Important role of unit factors necessitates accurate determination of unit floor areas based on precise measurements of unit boundaries.
